Work Experience In KHS Program

The following is the second in a four-part series on the work experience program at Kingston High School. Today, Freeman staff writer Jean F. Dolan details the distributive education phase.

By JEAN F. DOLAN

The distributive education students make up the bulk of Kingston High School business department's work experience program.

It was with 20 retail sales students the program was started in 1943. From its humble beginnings, the distributive education phase has grown to the point where in the past year 192 pupils were employed in part-time positions to gain work experience credits.

In addition to credits earned, students were paid a total of $217,844.97 for the year. Average hourly wage was $1.543. Some individual students earned as much as two and three thousand dollars for the year with one boy making $4,952.

All Phases Represented

Employers in the distributive education co-op represent all phases of local business and industry. Not just retail stores are involved. Restaurants, service stations, theaters and laundromats participate as well as industries such as Hercules Powder Company, Dr. Gilbert F. Hoppenstedt, local veterinarian, employed William McGahan for 940 hours.

Work and school are but a part of the overall distributive education unit. Students have organized a local chapter of the Distributive Education Club of America which is very active in the district.

Earlier this year, Kingston DECA hosted a regional parley in preparation for the state meeting at the Concord Hotel.

Competitions in sales demonstration, public speaking, mathematics and parliamentary procedure highlight the meetings. Added to the excitement of the statewide contests is the glamorous atmosphere of an elegant resort hotel.

Prepares Student

All of this combines to graduate a well-rounded, poised business person who can go on to bigger and better things.

One of the local activities which students look forward to each year is being manager for a day. Students take over a department store acting as managers and department heads for a day.

For a number of years, they conducted this operation at the J. C. Penney store on Wall Street. Last Month, DE students ran Britts Kingston Plaza store for their moment in the sun.

Officers of the club are John Staccio, president; Darlene Genthner, vice president; Richard Fabiano, secretary; Diane Durling, treasurer; William Roosa, historian and Richard Clausi, parliamentarian.

Coordinating the distributive education program are James Waltamath and F. Ronald Bullis with Loryne Connick, business department head as chief coordinator.

"Two-Way Street"

In the "field" experience which one employer called "a two-way street", students learn such business world basics as taking orders and tending customer needs with a smile. In return the employer has a ready supply of part-time help by merely contacting the school. The student has already indicated his interest in work by signing up for the program.

Although the school employees are usually started at a minimum pay rate, most employers reward cheerfulness and hard work with increases as warranted. Thus the incentive is encouraged another notch.

Employers know that students coming to them from distributive education classes have the fundamentals of business mathematics, selling techniques and the like. This they mold with on-the-job experience.

Total Preparation

The entire concept of the work experience program appears to be total preparation for employment years and for life in general.

Students find abstracts of the classroom must be applied on a person to person basis. Through the work experience they learn a flexibility in meeting situations not covered in the textbook.

Distributive education is not the only facet of work experience offered by the high school. Students in the office skills unit are given the opportunity to try their wings.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—The U. N. General Assembly started an emergency session on the Middle East crisis today with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin in New York to urge that it push Israel to give up captured Arab territory.

Assembly President Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan, convening the 122-nation body, suggested a summit conference.

He welcomed "leading personalities who have come long distances" for the session and said their presence aroused hope that "the issue at hand may be dealt with on the ultimate level of international consultation."

In a glancing reference to the war in Vietnam, Pazhwak said: "The crisis in the Middle East is not the only one that today touches on the problem of security on a world scale."

"It is regrettable," he continued, "that such conflicts, which have stubbornly resisted countless moves and peace proposals, have evaded fruitful consultation."

"I personally consider the conflict in the Middle East to be a matter solely for the United Nations to solve," Pazhwak said.

Some Israeli officials have argued that the United Nations is incapable of producing a settlement and that Israel should deal directly with the Arabs.

Pazhwak said: "All parties directly involved are pledged to adhere to the principles of the same charter, as are the major powers, who as privileged members of our organization have special responsibilities and are in a position to influence such situations in the interest of peace."

He said states directly involved also are members of the General Assembly and "therefore can objectively act to influence a just peace."

The opening meeting this morning was called to deal only with procedural matters, such as adoption of the agenda and appointment of a credentials committee, and a few of the top-drawer government officials from around the world were expected to show up for it.

The session will get down to business Monday, when the United States, the Soviet Union and Israel are listed to speak, in that order.

RUSSIANS ARRIVE FOR U.N. SESSION — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin acknowledges cheers of onlookers as he leads delegation from Kennedy Airport terminal today. condemn Israel as an aggressor.

But some diplomats at the United Nations believed that a resolution calling for a pull back of Israeli troops without a condemnation provision had a good chance of adoption.

The French had proposed a Big Four conference on the Middle East before Kosygin's visit. French officials had said De Gaulle would go to New York if he was convinced there was a chance of serious East-West negotiations and if the Russians would not use the General Assembly for a propaganda display.

After Kosygin left, informants said there was no immediate prospect of De Gaulle's appearance in New York.

Egyptian Deputy Prime Minister Mahmoud Fawzi and Hassan Sabry el Kholy, personal representative of President Gamal Abdel Nasser, arrived this weekend to represent their government.

Arab foreign ministers arranged a meeting today in Kuwait to work out strategy on rebuilding problems and the Israeli conquest of lands in Egypt, Jordan and Syria. It was not known whether any of them would go to the U.N. session.

De Gaulle's decision to keep France neutral in last week's Middle East war brought violent objections from some French political and military leaders, a high French source said Friday. Sources said opponents argued that any friendships gained with Arab states would be fragile and the cutoff of arms supplies to Israel would jeopardize the basis of France's policy of selling weapons to all comers.

Maj. Gen Moshe Dayan, Israel's defense minister, rated the Syrian resistance as the toughest faced by the Israelis. "I would not be surprised if the superior Syrian resistance resulted from direction, training and command of experts of a foreign power," he said. "People heard radio instructions given in Russian."

In Syria, the government newspaper Al Thawra urged Arabs in Israeli-held land on the western bank of the Jordan River to wage secret armed resistance.

Red Ambush Leaves 15 Americans Dead

By GEORGE MCARTHUR

SAIGON (AP) — Communist guerrillas jumped a U.S. battalion in a jungle clearing today and raked it savagely with machine-gun fire before being silenced by strafing jets and artillery.

Associated Press photographer Henry Huet, who was with the embattled Americans, reported about 15 of them were killed and 40 to 50 wounded in the bitter three-hour battle.

The battalion of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division was hit about 50 miles north of Saigon as it began to set up a perimeter in War Zone D, one of the biggest remaining Red strongholds in Vietnam.

The battalion had set out early today through the jungle for the clearing. About noon three companies — perhaps 500 men — were in the area or just outside the treeline.

When the third twin-engine Chinook helicopter arrived in the 400-yard-long clearing with the battalion's heavy equipment, the Communists opened fire — seemingly from all around the clearing.

U.S. soldiers hit the ground, the big helicopters threw out their loads, and the troop commanders shouted orders and grabbed radios to call for air and artillery.

The Americans were hampered in firing back because some had advanced into the clearing and the troops in the clearing were afraid of hitting them. One company that was inside the trees was apparently worst hit by the Communists.

Within about 15 minutes, U.S. artillery was pounding the Reds. In another 15 minutes the jets had arrived.

By this time, it was evident the firing was coming from three sides of the clearing. The jets and artillery established a curtain of fire along that arc.

"If it hadn't been for the air and artillery," Huet reported,

"there is no telling what would have happened."

As the sun faded behind the treetops, the Red guns fell silent, and medical evacuation choppers began to sweep in. Huet counted about a dozen evacuation helicopters flying from the zone, and more dead and wounded were still being brought in from the damp woods.

The Communists also unleashed mortar and rocket attacks today on U.S. and South Vietnamese positions in the central highlands — an area where the next big Red offensive is expected.

At the same time Gen. William G. Westmoreland's headquarters revealed that it had reinforced the highlands area with the 173rd Airborne Brigade, more than three weeks ago. The movement had been held secret until today.

Both the U.S. and South Vietnamese military commands have predicted another Communist offensive in the highlands with the coming of the monsoon rains, which are now falling steadily over the jungle plateau.

The Communists have been raking U.S. and South Vietnamese posts with mortar probes for days. The attacks today hit U.S. Special Forces camp, an engineering company headquarters, the South Vietnamese 24th Special Zone military headquarters in Kontum City and the 2nd Field Hospital, also in Kontum City.

SENDING THE MESSAGE — A captured Vietnamese girl uses loudspeaker microphone held by Cpl. Peper Pepper of Santa Barbara, Calif., to broadcast a message to Viet Cong in vicinity of Duc Pho, Vietnam. She asked them to surrender or be killed by the Americans. There was no response. The 15-year-old was captured in a hole after her carbine-wielding female companion was killed. Under interrogation the girl identified herself as a member of a local Viet Cong platoon. (AP Wirephoto)

Plenty of Time for Identification

Say Attack on Liberty Was No Mistake

By COLIN FROST

VALETTA, Malta (AP) — Senior crewmen of the damaged U.S. Navy ship Liberty are convinced that Israel's air and torpedo boat attack that cost 34 American lives was deliberate, a responsible source said in Valletta Saturday.

They have testified to that effect before the Navy inquiry court now in secret session aboard the ship as she undergoes emergency repair in a Malta drydock, the source said.

Their conviction was based on the belief that the Israelis had ample time to identify the Liberty, and on the intensity of the attack.

Liberty was struck June 8 as she lay 15 miles off the Israeli coast. She is a freighter converted three years ago to a naval communications and research ship.

Except for her array of antennae she has the contours of a merchant ship and her only armament was four .50-caliber machine guns.

She sailed into the Mediterranean from her base at Norfolk, Va., in the first week of June and had been in position off the Israeli coast only 24 hours when attacked.

Officially, her task was to maintain communications with U.S. embassies in the war-torn Middle East, as they planned evacuations of U.S. citizens.

But all military men in Malta, long versed in the ways of war, take it for granted that Liberty also was ordered to intercept radio communications of the fighting Israeli and Arab forces.

For four hours before the attack the ship had been under surveillance from Israeli planes circling overhead.

"We were flying the Stars and Stripes and it's absolutely impossible that they shouldn't know who we were," a survivor said. "This was a deliberate and planned attack and the remarkable thing about it was the accuracy of their air fire."

Despite the aerial surveillance, the attack came as a total surprise. Some of Liberty's off-duty crewmen were sunbathing on deck when jets screamed in.

The action lasted less than an hour. Liberty received 81 hits from aircraft rocket and cannon fire. The rockets tore through her plates like paper.

Most fire was concentrated on the bridge, where the ship's executive officer was killed. A bullet tore through the cabin of the commanding officer, Cmdr. William McGonagle, piercing the plating just above his pillow. He was not in the bunk but later was hit in the leg by shrapnel on the bridge.

Because of secrecy imposed by the inquiry court, there has been no official report of the number of jets involved.

Indications, however, are that three did the actual damage.

Liberty already was blazing from the jet attack when torpedoes fired, at least three torpedoes in the classic pattern — one for the bow, one amidships and one for the stern.

One was shot out of the water by the remnants of Liberty's gun crews. One missed. One struck on the starboard side, tearing a hole 20 feet wide by 25 high in Liberty's plating, most of it below waterline.

How she made the six-day voyage to Malta mystifies dockyard veterans who saw some of the worst hit ships of World War

II. Every movement of the ship sent water in her holds crashing against the bulkheads, which began to bulge and looked near collapse.

Engineers shored them up with timber like the props sometimes used to support old buildings.

Most of her casualties were working in the hold struck by the torpedo. Since the ship's conversion, this hold had been used as an office and communications bay. The Navy believes the 25 men inside were killed instantly by concussion and never knew what hit them.

By the time Liberty reached Malta, nine of her dead had been transferred to the carrier America along with the more seriously hurt of her 75 wounded.

The torpedo knocked out Liberty's engines temporarily. She reached Malta under her own power, under the escort of the destroyer Davis and fleet tug Papago.

In drydock, 20 bodies were found—three so badly mutilated as to be unidentifiable—and five were missing, presumed washed out of the hole in her side.

Israel apologized for the attack and said it was made in error. The U.S. government accepted the explanation.

The attack and Israel's apology have been reported in the press and on the government radio in Israel, but there has been no official Israeli explanation of the attack.

Expect Arrests of Several Youths In Wiltwyck Club Vandalism Probe

Arrests in connection with investigation of vandalism at the Wiltwyck Country Club last Saturday, were expected to be made today, it was learned from an authoritative source.

The arrests of several youths would climax an investigation conducted by Sheriff William B. Martin and County Investigator Harold T. Bowers. Damage to club property was unofficially estimated at thousands of dollars.

After the damage was discovered last Saturday by John Estey, superintendent of greens at the club, a spokesman said the golf car house had been entered and five or six cars, each valued at several hundred dollars were driven out on the course. Green No. 3 was heavily damaged by the cars.

The club spokesman said the swimming pool area was entered and those involved evidently went swimming before cooking hotdogs and eating candy which had been taken from a concession stand.

The golf cars were smashed against rocks on the grounds and damaged extensively, the club member said. Empty beer cans were found on the grounds, it was reported.

Investigator Bowers took part in the original investigation and continued the probe until the arrests were made.

Bandit Sought In Death of Buffalo Banker

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — An intensive manhunt was on today for the bandit who gunned down the 69-year-old manager and secretary of a savings and loan association during an attempted holdup.

Fifty FBI agents and 30 city policemen were brought into the case after Edmund H. Mayer was slain Friday as his wife, Dechantal, stood by helplessly.

Three suspects resembling the description of the six-foot-tall bandit underwent questioning by police and viewing by witnesses but all were released.

The holdup was the ninth staged in Buffalo area banks since late last year. Loot was taken in all the others but no one suffered personal injury.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODIE ISHMAEL

The faith of the Rev. Bart Leach has led him to become a pioneer in a new ministry.

While at the University of Pennsylvania, where he was voted the most valuable Ivy League basketball player in 1955, he spent three summers working at the university's camp for underprivileged boys. This confirmed his hunch that he wanted to work with people. After attending Princeton Theological Seminary, he was ordained in 1959, and in the parishes where he served he searched for better ways to help people. He says: "I began to feel that in the pastoral position I was in the grandstand and they were in the arena. I wanted to get into the 'arena' with them."

Recently came the opportunity to join them in the arena. Kimberly Clark Corporation invited him to join it and focus his ministry on the industrial scene. He will examine the areas of management practices and personnel programming from the standpoint of Christian ethics. "One can not separate secular life from his ministry," he comments.

Alliance Congregation Dedicates New Church

Members and friends of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church will attend the dedication of the newly occupied church at 90 Miller's Lane in this city.

The open house service is scheduled for June 18 at 3 p. m. and will feature former Kingston Alliance pastors, several area ministers and business and professional men as speakers. Former area residents from far and near have signified their intentions to attend this important event. All charter members will receive special recognition during the service. There will be a nursery for both the babies and toddlers during this service.

Started 33 Years Ago

The work of the local church began just 33 years ago this month under the ministry of the Rev. Lester Luck now of Deposit. The congregation met weekly in rented quarters until a building at the corner of Franklin and Pine Streets was purchased in the late 1930's.

The purchase of a house at 33 Warren Street shortly thereafter became the paragon as the second floor of the church building was renovated for additional Sunday school rooms. This completed phase two.

Mrs. Sherman Short deeded a property on Miller's Lane to the church in 1957 and preparation was begun for the building of a new place of worship. After the Rev. Mr. Briscoe left to assume the pastorate at Rochester, the Rev. Willard Crunkilton accepted a call to fill the Kingston pulpit in 1960.

Move for Christmas
The Rev. Mr. Crunkilton, now at Canton, Pa., was succeeded by the Rev. George Osborne in 1965. Planning was completed following year and 12 months ago a groundbreaking service was held on the site of the new edifice. Work continued into the late autumn and at last the initial service was observed on Christmas Day.

While final completion of the building has not become a reality, inasmuch as there is some finishing to be done in the basement and landscaping on the outside, the facilities are being used.

The service of Sunday afternoon will be followed by a walk-through tour of facilities and refreshments will be served. The Rev. W. Emerson Ackerman, Northeastern District Superintendent, will address the assembly during the dedication and will also speak at the 11 a. m. and the 7 p. m. services. The public may attend.

INTELLIGENT OPTIMISM

It is important to note that despite the wide gulf which separates pessimists and optimists, they agree on one great fundamental fact: both recognize that hope and promise rest upon the triumph of righteousness and justice and truth. On this there is no argument. The difference lies, of course, in the fact that the pessimist sees no chance that goodness can thrive to any extent that possibly could save the world from complete and ultimate catastrophe; while the optimist believes that, under God, goodness must win out over the forces of evil.

One is reminded of A. N. Whitehead's incisive observation that "the greatest proof for the reality of good is the instability of evil."

The pessimist, by grounding his gloom on the impotence and ineffectiveness of the forces of righteousness in our kind of world, all unconsciously bears tremendous witness to his inner conviction that only in goodness, and in what Emerson calls "the triumph of principle," is there hope for mankind.

Men need enough faith in the possibility that the world can be saved from catastrophe in order to apply creative effort to the struggle to save it from

Bridge
East Forgot to Play King

By Oswald & James Jacoby Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Let's try to see how an expert's mind works as he bids and plays a hand in match point duplicate. Our expert sits South today and his first thought is that he has a normal two heart overcall. Not too weak, but very little in reserve.

His partner raises to three and South decides to go on to game. Not that he is at all confident. He knows that he really has no rebid but he has noted that his partner is an underbidder and, in any case, he expects that the field will be in game.

When dummy hits the table South wishes that he had settled for three hearts. He is looking at two quick spade losers and two very probable club losers later on. Is there any way he can eliminate one of those club losers? Yes, there is! He can draw trumps, strip the hand of spades and hearts and play ace and one club. If it turns out that either opponent started with doubleton king-queen; king-jack or queen-jack of clubs there is an automatic end play.

There is no use giving up. He had better try for it and in addition he had better play in such manner that if one opponent started with king-small he will forget to drop his king under the ace.

He should time the play so that he will lead the first club from dummy and he should also play to lead the second club from his own hand. If West started with king-jack and two small clubs he might well play the jack whereupon East could be stuck in with the queen.

East cashed two spades and shifts to a trump. South wins in his own hand, leads a diamond to dummy's ace, ruffs a diamond, leads a trump to dummy and plays a club.

As you can see East holds king-seven and should play the king but this East played the seven. South ruffed his last spade in dummy, ruffed dummy's last diamond and led a club. East was in with the king and had to give South a ruff and discard and his contract.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, JUNE 17, 1967

JUSTICE MARSHALL

Confirmation by the Senate of the nomination of Solicitor General Thurgood Marshall to the Supreme Court of the United States should be especially hailed by advocates of civil rights because the nominee has spent the major part of his career in this field.

This high honor to one of their race also should be acclaimed by all Negroes. For in the words of Floyd McKissick, militant leader of the Congress of Racial Equality, the appointment stirs "pride in the breast of every blackman." Thurgood Marshall was general counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and helped win several school-desegregation cases.

Men like Mr. Justice Thurgood Marshall and U.S. Senator Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, who have proved themselves, present the kind of symbols which should be followed rather than the hate-preaching Adam Clayton Powells and the Stokely Carmichaels.

Mr. Justice Marshall, who also served on the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, will have further opportunity for service to his country while sitting on the highest court in the land.

KEEP ON BEING HUMAN

The graduating class of a high school in Charlotte, N. C., heard a word of caution from its commencement speaker that might well be passed along to students—and their elders—everywhere.

"The danger facing civilization today," Chancellor D. W. Colvard of the Charlotte campus of the University of North Carolina warned the graduates, "is not in machines becoming more human, but in man becoming more and more like a machine."

The chancellor, if he will forgive an unacademic expression, said a mouthful.

Day by day, it seems, modern living is becoming more and more mechanized more impersonal, unpeopled and numberish.

It's not only those blinkety-blink computers but the trend toward treating human beings as numbers instead of persons. And while this may be extremely efficient, it's also coldly dehumanizing.

No one warns up to someone who calls him by number or, in more tender moments, by the cuddly salutation of "Occupant." Or even "Boxholder."

What Chancellor Colvard was telling the high school graduates was not to permit themselves to be so caught up in the space age pace that they forget that they have something no machine can have—human warmth.

How long has it been since a vending machine smiled at you and said, "Hurry back"?

FLAG'S NOT FOR BURNING

It has become commonplace for enemies of this country in foreign lands to burn the American flag in demonstrations against the government and people of the United States. We accept that as a risk of leadership.

But when American citizens burn the flag to express their dissent with policies of the government, especially their objections to the war in Vietnam, or their refusal to serve in its armed forces, then tolerance ends and reality begins.

For here are Americans desecrating the symbol of all that has made possible their freedom and liberty under the protection of the very flag they trample and tear down and burn.

For them to call this honest dissent guaranteed under the bill of rights as freedom of speech is a travesty of that freedom. No sovereign state, least of all those of the Communist bloc which inspire such insults to the flag, would tolerate it for one instance in their own citizens on their own grounds.

The House Judiciary Committee has prepared a bill deeming it a crime to desecrate the flag of the United States. It was inspired by the burning of the flag by pro-Communist demonstrators against the war in Vietnam April 15.

Every one of the 50 states has a law against desecrating the flag. The House Judiciary Committee is right to make it a federal crime also. It would punish by a $1,000 fine or one year imprisonment, or both, all who publicly mutilate, deface, defile, burn or trample upon the flag.

There should be no delay in making this law effective. There should be a decent restraint toward the flag even by those who are contemptuous of it, for without its protection they would not have the freedom they betray repeatedly.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is providing a grant of $564,409 over a three-year period to Boston scientists to study the behavior patterns of an alcoholic on a drinking spree. That much money should buy a big bust for a lot of two-fisted drinkers.

We would hate to see hungry people deprived of food, but we understand the concern of the House Appropriations committee, which cut $167 million from a Food for Peace $1.7 billion request to finance food abroad. They want to make sure there will be enough to keep school children at home well fed through the school luncheon program.

Reds Warned Nasser Not to Start War

Editor's Note: George Weller, Pulitzer prize-winning reporter of the Chicago Daily News Foreign Service, reached Athens yesterday after being evacuated from Cairo. This is his exclusive story of why Moscow warned Nasser that under no circumstances should he start operations against Israel, and of why the United Arab Republic was beaten in the first three hours of the war. Because of censorship, Weller was unable to tell this story until he reached Athens.

ATHENS, June 14—Three weeks ago a team of Soviet inspectors checked airfields in the United Arab Republic and reported them in an alarming state of unpreparedness.

Dimitri Pojadiaev, Soviet Ambassador to the U.A.R., forwarded the inspectors' report to Moscow and Soviet Premier Alexie N. Kosygin promptly warned U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser on account to start operations against Israel.

Nasser admitted Kosygin's warning in his "farewell" speech, but omitted the reason for it.

The Soviet inspectors found pilots who had not been airborne for days, sometimes weeks. They found airfields with rudimentary dummy planes, easily distinguishable by competent high-level photography.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to The Editor must bear the name of the writer and communications must be limited to 300 words free of libel and personal attacks upon individuals as such. Only original communications addressed to The Freeman will be printed. We reserve the right to edit and shorten any letter.

S. James Matthews, counsel for the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency has issued a statement in clarification of a report in the Thursday evening edition of The Kingston Daily Freeman. Matthews said he did so, so that there would be no misinterpretation of his remarks.

Dear Editor: At no time have I ever stated anything that would indicate I disagreed in this matter with Congressman Joseph V. Resnick. I believe the choice of the words that I hit back at charges was unfortunate.

I agree with what the Congressman is attempting to do from the public point of view. The price paid for the real property should be made public if it is allowed by Federal regulations. There is a very consistent philosophy of disclosure of public records and governmental responsibility.

As an attorney my own personal beliefs are not allowed to replace the law. As the lawyer for the Urban Renewal Agency, I was asked to render an opinion as to whether the prices paid for real property acquisitions could be disclosed. I am of the persuasion that they can not under pertinent Federal regulations.

Congressman Resnick has been told that Section 51 of the General Municipal Law applies to this situation. While I was aware of the statute at the time of giving my opinion, I do not believe it is applicable since the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency is a public benefit corporation without taxing powers.

The question is a very close point of view and I believe reasonable attorneys can disagree. I have personally checked with two other attorneys who, while conceding the closeness of the issue, concur with my opinions.

But what threw the Soviet officers into something close to panic was the Egyptians' insistence on massing all planes of the same family together on one field.

This concentration can be indulged by vast powers like Russia and the United States with widespread warning nets because it facilitates maintenance and handling spare parts.

But with an enemy barely 15 minutes fighter time away from the U.A.R. borders, such concentration was asking for disaster.

Israel was able to go hard for Tupolev 16 bombers which cost nearly $3,000,000 (M) each and cream 31 of them. She did not neglect the slower Ilyushin 28s, worth about $300,000 each and bagged 29, for a total of $9,000,000.

The Israelis destroyed 14 new Sukhoi fighter bombers, worth $2,000,000 each, 143 MIG 21s, 107 MIG 17s and 27 MIG 19s.

All together Israel claims to have destroyed 441 Arab aircraft, about seven-eighths of them Egyptian. Only 31 Arab planes were shot down in the air.

(By contrast, the United States in Vietnam has destroyed about 115 MIGs, only 30 of them on the ground.)

Although the local agency does not have to disclose the prices, it could do so if it were not for Section 13-1 of the Policies and Requirements for Local Public Agencies, promulgated by the Department of Housing and Urban Development which states "In carrying out its real estate acquisition program, the L. P. A. (Kingston Urban Renewal Agency) shall (1) Recognize its obligation impartially to protect the interests of all concerned. . . . In my opinion the Kingston Agency would not be impartial to the former home owners if the prices for the real property were disclosed. Personal embarrassment, harassment, animosity and the like, could conceivably be heaped upon the people who are being displaced."

I have made public the fact of my earnings as the counsel of the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency over the past five and a half years. "The people who sell their property to KURA may do likewise if they wish."

The Kingston Urban Renewal Agency has written a letter to the Regional Office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development in which it states that if a directive to disclose is given in unequivocal terms, the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency would immediately comply and disclose the entire list of selling prices to the public through the news medias.

I again point out that the prices at which the Kingston Urban Renewal Agency purchases property are set by the Federal government. Periodically, Federal and State auditors have, as a matter of routine, examined the Agency's books.

Yours truly
S. JAMES MATTHEWS

During the night raids that followed the war's opening, I watched in Cairo as two great motorized cranes shuttled back and forth along the Nile River between the military airfields of Cairo West and Heliopolis, removing wrecked planes from the fields so the runways could be used.

The story was the same on the U.A.R.'s other 13 main military airfields.

For practical purposes, within three hours the war was over.

Once the Tupolevs, Ilyushins and Sukhois were destroyed, the U.A.R.'s Gen. Sidki Mahmud could no longer bomb Israel.

Israeli fighters normally patrolling her cramped sky-space could be released for the main battle against the tank columns of Gen. Abdel Mortagi.

For four years Mortagi's tanks have been having a pigeon shoot in Yemen under empty skies. Their surprise when Gen. Mordechai Hod's missile and mystere jets gave them undivided attention was painful.

Only 200 of Mortagi's 950 tanks made it back across the Suez Canal, making the loss in tanks alone well over $100,000,000 (M).

Israel's air force, due to its cramped home space, was underground from the beginning.

Though outnumbered two to one in every category, it was safe.

One American who visited an Israeli air field looked around and asked bewilderedly, "But where are the planes?"

Russia had provided the U.A.R. with the best modern radar equipment such as is used by the Soviets for close-in threats like the American bases in Turkey.

The defect here seems to have been the same as in planes—a lack of competently directed, realistic training exercises.

One report in Cairo is that Egypt had her revolving radar displays cocked at too high an angle, a reasonable precaution considering that the U.A.R. expected to be tipped off days before any war by high flying Israeli photographic reconnaissance planes.

The Egyptians knew the danger of low-level attacks under the radar but thought their short-range radar along the coasts would warn them.

Nasser, in his speech to the nation, gloomily leaned on the stab-in-the-back theme saying, "We were hit from the west when we expected to be hit from the east or north."

Soviet officers, frequently warned about the proud nationalism and sentiments of Egyptians, never dared to treat frankly their deficiencies. In radar exercises, for example, it's necessary to train operators against an enemy who comes in against one airfield, then drops out of sight as he dives in to attack, but never releases his bombs and instead veers away to hit another field flying at a level too low for the radar eye. Egyptians never had these exercises.

The Israelis are reported to have used a new secret bomb, made especially for airfields and called "The Needle." It was a long penetrating shaft, which had the effect on Egypt's fields of causing underground explosions, which are difficult to repair.

In the classroom, there are huge television sets in the wall. A teacher can call for any type of lesson from the film library. Other teachers, sitting around small tables with students, stretch their legs, fold their hands behind their heads, and open a free-for-all seminar.

"How can we learn to learn?" When one student falls behind, the teacher gets the discussion going, then turns to that student for a one-to-one discussion. A girl who is a slow reader sits facing a wall, and she regulates a small saffron light that moves across a page of a book. She can make the light go slow or fast. She had a problem. She's solving it herself.

Now the light jumps across the line and zips across the next one. Afterward, the teacher will ask her what she has read. She will answer: 80 per cent of the questions correctly. She has learned to relax and absorb. In a dark room, eight boys murmur call letters into microphones. They have ham radios, and they connect other hams in other cities. A month ago, they talked to Barry Goldwater in Phoenix.

Before they can study radio, and radio waves, they must learn to build these radio sets; put them together. Outside, a carpenter shop with lathes, band saws, punch presses and templates is buzzing. These youngsters elect to study carpentry as an extra subject beyond the minimum of seven. They call the shop "Rec Tech."

Eight graders are learning to type. Little ones experiment with a wind tunnel. An entire breakfast of microscopes is ready for a science class, because Nova doesn't believe in "I'll take a look, then you take one." One day in the commissary, five students boasted that they smoked marijuana. The investigation was polite and firm. Four turned out to be braggers. One boy had actually tried it. His parents were advised.

Merchants and bankers and doctors are invited to lecture at Nova schools. They teach such subjects as How to Run a Grocery Store, Can Money Work by Itself, and What's Important About Personal Hygiene. A big square room, sound-proofed, is a library for students who want to dig into a subject in depth.

There are no concrete floors. Rugs give the students a feeling of elegance. In the physics laboratory, teacher Race Woodman was washing some retorts when he burst into laughter. "This system of go as slow as you please," he said, "or as fast as you please is all right, but I have a boy and a girl who are jumping the fences. The class is on lesson 10; these two asked me for lesson number 17." He tapped his temple. "It's not written yet. It's up here."

Nova believes that every person has, not one, but two talents. Dr. Arthur B. Wolfe, director of Nova Schools, reminds students not to stop hunting when they find the first one. Look for the second, and study it as a minor subject. Then, later in life, if the first one should collapse, turn to the second one.

One of the most interesting positions is held by Robert W. Allen, who is director of Academic Games. He specializes in students who are classified as "non-motivated or under-achievers." In his section, he has complex games that involve mathematics, reasoning, politics, propaganda and words. The kids are given titles marked with letters and numbers and play each other across a table.

One group of under-achievers was given an Intelligence Quotient Test before trying Allen's fun games. Another I.Q., after a few weeks of play, showed that they rated 20.9 higher than before. Last year, 200 of them, got college scholarships.

The men who founded the school—Ashmore, Forman, Rushing, Hines and Synn—were not looking for brilliant students. Synnstedt rolls a pencil and murmurs: "Send us the so-called dumbbells. If we can make them enjoy study, and literally fight to stay in Nova, then we've accomplished something." U. S. News and World Report says that Nova "may revolutionize education all over the United States."

McGeorge Bundy president of the Ford Foundation, is backing Nova with money. The basic tenet is to make the child yearn to be educated. It isn't always easy. Stuart Symington believes that complete academic freedom impels the student to initiate his own honor system. "Coercion," Robert McNamara once said, "merely captures man. Freedom captivates him."

It is now possible to piece together Moscow's tactics in the Middle East war.

A short time before the crisis, the Russians worked on Gamal Abdel Nasser's men in Moscow. It is known that the Soviet Union men whispered, among many other things, that Israel was massing troops on the Syrian border. Moscow also hinted strongly to Nasser that Russia would give him backing in a strong, dramatic gesture of confrontation with Israel.

Thereupon, Nasser asked the United Nations forces to leave, massed his own troops on Israel's borders and blockaded the Gulf of Aqaba.

By Soviet Communist theory, this should have put the United States on the spot. Washington had two choices:

It could pledge to Israel to keep Aqaba open. Then Russia could paint the United States as an "aggressor" against the Arabs.

On the other hand, the United States could decide not to run the blockade. Assuming that no war broke out, Moscow could paint the United States as ineffectual, unable to keep its agreements when the going got rough.

Note that the Arabs were committed, in co-operation with Moscow, to a series of belligerent acts—blockading Aqaba, stoning American and British embassies, accusing the United States of bombing Arab nations.

(One major Communist tactic is to lure men into some illegal act or deed in co-operation with Communists. This helps to "tie" them psychologically to the Communists. In Communist jargon, it "commits" them.)

In the pre-shooting blockade period and early in the shooting war, when it was not certain who was winning, the Soviet Union blocked effective United Nations action.

When it was clear Israel was winning, the Russians moved fast in the United Nations to co-operate with a ceasefire proposal, delaying only long enough to make an unsuccessful attempt to get the U.N. to order the Israelis back to old boundaries.

Once the U. N. Security Council agreed on a truce, the Soviet Union moved to its next tactical maneuver—using the U.N. and television as a sounding board in an attempt to brand the United States, Britain and Israel as aggressors.

The Soviet bloc went at this branding by being all ways on the attack. They didn't attempt logic. They just attacked.

When Israel agreed to a truce and Egypt and Syria didn't, the Russians ignored the Arab defiance of the U.N. The Moscow bloc just kept verbally attacking Israel, the United States and Britain.

Truces are notoriously difficult to effect quickly. In a battle there are always units which don't get the word. Later, when reports came in of truce violations by both sides, the Russian bloc continued to accuse Israel of "aggression." They kept the United States, British and Israeli spokesmen busy defending.

The Russians didn't win any U. N. Security Council test votes. But they obviously didn't hope for this. What Moscow wanted and what it got was a propaganda field day on television programs going out to hundreds of millions of listeners worldwide.

The Russian aim was—through repetition, not logic—to picture the United States as "the real aggressor" in the Middle East war. Russian psychological war theory holds that constant repetition to many inevitably affects world opinion. They hold that if they repeat one simple allegation often enough, many people will believe—or at least believe.

The United States will have to develop some way to counter these Soviet tactics if we are to spoil Soviet fishing in troubled waters.

LBJ Set for Kosy; Meets Aussie Head

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson swings into a foreign policy session with Australian Prime Minister Harold Holt today as a possible prelude to a more crucial one later with Soviet Premier Alexie N. Kosygin. Johnson, who returned early today from politicking at Austin, Tex., meets with Holt at nearby Camp David, Md. Their plan for an informal, friendly diplomatic meeting at the LBJ Ranch in Texas was upset by Kosygin's visit to the United Nations in New York.

The debate between Johnson and the No. 2 man in the Soviet hierarchy may begin Monday when the President addresses professors and leading educators at the State Department in what White House officials call a major speech on Vietnam and the uneasy truce in the Middle East.

At the same time, Kosygin is expected to leap into verbal action at an emergency session of the U.N. General Assembly, engineered by the Soviet Union to push its demand for condemnation of Israel and restoration of land wrested from Arab neighbors in last week's blitz.

Johnson said last night in Austin the first and greatest requirement for establishing lasting peace in the Middle East is that "each nation must accept the right of its neighbors to stable and secure existence."

But Johnson also stressed once more the United States stands for "the territorial integrity and political independence of all states in the area." The word "all" was underlined in the text of his speech.

It was delivered to some 1,000 members of the five-state President's Club of the Southwest, who donate $1,000 or more a year to the Democratic party cause.

Uncertainties about the Middle East, U.N. activities and a possible meeting with Kosygin brought about radical changes in the Texas trip and presidential weekend.

Johnson had planned to meet with Holt at the LBJ Ranch during the weekend his daughter, Luci Nugent, expected the arrival of the President's first grandchild.

In an apricot, ankle length gown, Luci, her husband Patrick J. Nugent and her mother met the President and the Johnsons' eldest daughter, Lynda, at the entrance to Austin Municipal Auditorium Friday night.

Johnson, accompanied by Lynda, had come directly from Bergstrom Air Force Base in a white dinner jacket after the jet flight from Washington. Mrs. Johnson arrived in Austin earlier this week to be with Luci.

They ignored about 100 orderly pickets protesting the Vietnam War and perhaps 25 American flag wavers picketing the pickets.

The commitment in the Middle East, Johnson said, is one of intense political concern with a crisis that he said became acute with "the dangerous and unjustified closing of the Gulf of Aqaba."

Hostilities began after Egypt shut off this route to the Israeli Port of Elath.

During the three weeks of tension, as for years past, Johnson said the United States pursued a policy based on its belief in the political and territorial integrity of all Middle East nations, and in the avoidance of war, and in the right of innocent passage at sea.

The cease-fire engineered in the United Nations, with both U.S. and Soviet support was a first long step away from peril, Johnson said.

June 17, 1947 — Oscar V. Newkirk was a unanimous choice to run for mayor by city Republicans. Raymond MacAndrew was rumored to be the Democrats' choice over incumbent William Edelmuth in the wake of charges on gambling in the city.

Johnson Still Wants Tax Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson hasn't abandoned plans to ask for an income tax hike, administration officials say. But they won't talk about the size of the tax bite or its possible timing.

William H. Shaw, assistant to Secretary of Commerce Alexander B. Trowbridge, said Friday the administration is not "locked in" on a six per cent income tax surcharge proposed earlier this year by Johnson. The President suggested the tax surcharge be imposed as of July 1, but has not submitted legislation to Congress.

Shaw, asked by newsmen whether the increase might be as high as 10 per cent, said no figure has been decided on.

Johnson had said a tax hike would be needed to offset inflationary pressures resulting from a surge in the economy in the last six months of this year.

May figures released Friday by the government appeared to both back and clash with that assessment. The Federal Reserve Board said the industrial production level was 155.5 per cent of the 1957-59 base average. That was a half per cent below April's level.

The unemployment rate rose slightly in May to 3.8 per cent, with heavy declines in manufacturing and construction, partly as the result of strikes.

But the Reserve Board also reported a slight jump in retail sales during the month, while the Commerce Department said the number of new private housing units climbed 11.7 per cent above March.

Father's Day, Billion-Dollar Business

BY KAROL STONGER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It all began in 1910 when a young Spokane, Wash., woman, sought recognition for her widowed father who had raised six children. She originated Father's Day as an expression of love, devotion and gratitude.

Today the idea credited to Mrs. John Bruce Dodd has grown into a billion-dollar business.

"We're living in a commercial situation," says a spokesman for the Father's Day Council Inc., "and no matter what we do it is expressed in business."

The council says Father's Day, which is observed next Sunday, is the biggest single promotion for men's merchandise. Last year more than $12 million was spent on publicity, not including paid advertising which "broke all previous records."

The council, a nonprofit promotional organization, and the National Retail Merchant's Association expect sales for Father's Day gifts to reach well over a billion dollars this year. Gifts will range from the usual ties, socks and shirts to air conditioners, backyard barbecue equipment and even automobiles.

"There's money around everybody's working and nobody's worried," said William Burston, merchandising manager of the association.

To promote the occasion, the Father's Day Council set down a strict schedule beginning with distribution of displays and advertising mats to merchants April 1.

May 25, was "national curtain-raising day" for publicity, and June 5 was the suggested date for retailers to start advertising and assembling window displays.

Manufacturers were busy turning out gifts not shown prior to the Father's Day selling period.

So what will be bestowed on Dad Sunday morning?

One department store says could be a banana-color, double-breasted blazer, or a tie in wild prints, florals, paisleys, stripes or checks.

In gifts under $2, there's an "air-conditioned" hat band for the outdoors type. The band is moistened then inserted into any hat for "instant summer comfort."

A chrome-plated fish scaler.

Takes Leading Role in Tonight's Play

Woodstock Playhouse has announced the casting of Jane Lloyd-Jones in the opening production of LUV tonight. Miss Lloyd-Jones, a leading lady of stature, replaces Charlotte Glenn, who was previously cast as the female lead but is now hospitalized because of sudden illness.

Miss Lloyd-Jones was reached at her summer home in Woodstock and offered the role of Ellen Manville an hour before rehearsals began. An actress of versatility and professionalism, she accepted the challenge.

Miss Lloyd-Jones has scored notable artistic success in performances in No Exit in a theatre conference in New York City, as Electra in Daughters of Atrius, and as Mistress Quickly in Merry Wives of Windsor. When John Blatchley, a director of the Royal Shakespeare Company in London, chanced to visit New York, he chose Miss Lloyd-Jones to portray Lady Macbeth in his production of Macbeth.

Miss Lloyd-Jones returns to The Woodstock Playhouse after an absence of four years. However, she has been closely associated with the Woodstock Playhouse since 1949 when she was engaged as its resident leading lady. That same year, she met and married Heywood Hale Brown, sports essayist for CBS News.

Wig Wagon Coming

Do blondes have more fun? You can find out for yourself. Montgomery Ward has announced that their nationally famous Wig Caravan will arrive in Kingston on Monday, June 19 for a three-day visit.

All may register in the contest for a free wiglet while in the store.

brides-to-be:

A beautiful wedding is one that is successfully planned. After it is all over, the bride will attest to the fact that a most important help is the cooperation by the shop where she purchased her gown and her attendant's gowns. Also she was secure in the knowledge that her wedding gown was individual as were her attendants, because she was able to select from lots of styles, and thus create her own idea of a wedding party and not just settle for something five other brides had.

It's at DOREEN'S you can achieve an individual look in wedding fashions. Brides are $65 to $125 and up, and attendants' gowns are $25 to $40 and up. Each is fitted to perfection and ready to take home weeks before the wedding, if you so desire.

Orders are not taken unless we can guarantee delivery—you will find this very important to you, because we have become known for "guaranteed delivery" with "no substitutions" at the last minute.

If you are planning a wedding, our bridal consultant awaits your pleasure and you can count on the complete privacy of a pre-arranged appointment. Tel. 331-6047 day or evening—closed Tuesday. For your convenience we suggest that you use our layaway plan.

Albany Editor Will Head San Juan Star

SAN JUAN (AP) — William J. Dorville announced Friday he is resigning as editor and publisher of the San Juan Star, effective June 30.

He will be succeeded as editor by Andrew Vigliucci, a former Star executive who until now has been managing editor of the Albany Times Union at Albany, N.Y.

In Albany, Executive Editor John J. Leary of the Times Union, said Vigliucci would remain in Albany until July 15.

Dorville founded the Star in 1959 and has been its editor from the start.

During that time, the English-language Star has enjoyed rapid growth. It began to make a profit after only three years and its total circulation now stands at nearly 40,000.

The Star has won a Pulitzer Prize, and two citations from The Associated Press Managing Editors Association.

Vigliucci has had long ties with the Star. He served as city editor under Dorville when the newspaper was started and later was promoted to managing editor.

Two Brooklyn youths were injured at 6:40 a. m. today when the car in which they were riding went out of control on Ulster Avenue, Saugerties, hit a utility pole and then crashed into the porch of a residence.

Rockefeller said he regarded the expansion announcement "as solid evidence that our efforts to make New York State an outstanding location for business and industry are successful."

The company announced it would spend $34 million to enlarge its operation. The work is to be completed by 1969.

Business Week in Review

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil began to flow again in the Middle East this past week, and a fast return to normalcy in the troubled area was hoped for by U.S. business and financial leaders.

Saudi Arabia, largest oil source in the Arab world, was the first to return to full production.

Tankers again began steaming to various world ports with cargoes of oil. They could not go to the United States or Britain, however, because of an embargo imposed by most of the Arab nations.

But the embargo was not expected to affect the United States, which produces most of its own oil. It could be troublesome, though, for Western Europe which depends on Middle Eastern and North African oil for 80 per cent of its imports.

Most of the Western countries, however, are reported to have reserve supplies for about two months or more.

Reopening of the Suez Canal was a question mark. Egypt claims the canal was closed by vessels sunk during the Arab-Israeli war and says it has no idea how long it will take to reopen the vital waterway.

The closing has dislocated ocean shipping and shipping rates are being forced upward. Some shippers are reported to have chartered ocean tankers at 50 per cent increased rates.

In other news of the week, U.S. automobile production was estimated at 174,396 units, up slightly from the 173,410 cars built in the previous week but down 6 per cent from the 186,291 in the year-ago week.

The auto industry said its early June sales ran 4 per cent ahead of the year earlier, totaling 247,989 cars. During the June 1-10 period, Ford Motor Co. said its retail deliveries were 20.7 per cent over 1966 and Chrysler Corp. had a 1.5 per cent gain.

General Motors Corp., however, said its sales were down 2.7 per cent and American Motors Corp. reported a 5.3 per cent drop.

Heading into the final weeks of production of 1967 models, the industry has set a target of 929,000 more cars before the model year ends. Most of these cars are to be built during the last three weeks of July, with the last '67 scheduled to come off the Ford lines early in August.

In a talk to the Automotive Analysts of New York, Chrysler President Virgil E. Boyd predicted 1967 would be the third-best sales year in industry history with total sales of about 8.3 million units.

The Commerce Department reported during the week that retail sales totaled $25.1 billion reported during the week that in April, or about 4 per cent above April 1966. Compared with March, the gain was about 1 per cent.

Durable goods sales decreased slightly from March but were 2 per cent over April 1966. Nondurable goods gained 1 per cent over March and 5 per cent over 1966.

The automotive group was up 2 per cent, compared with March and apparel sales were up 10 per cent. However, there was a 6 per cent drop in lumber, building, hardware and farm equipment.

The department also reported construction spending slowed further in April although spending on new housing increased. It said that at a $71.9-billion seasonally adjusted annual rate, outlays were down 2 per cent from March and down more than 8 per cent from a year earlier. Spending on new housing rose 2 per cent from the March level, it said, but public construction of all kinds dropped slightly.

Although prospective home buyers are finding mortgage money easier to secure, the cost of new homes continues to increase. Government figures show mortgage interest rates have dipped from last year's 7 per cent to 6 1/2 or 6 3/4 per cent, but the number of new homes put for sale stood at 185,000 March 31, compared with 219,000 a year earlier.

The government's restoration of the 7 per cent investment tax credit was cited for a spurt in rail equipment buying. Orders totaling nearly $100 million for new rolling stock were announced by six railroads and other railroads indicated they planned to increase car purchases. Before restoration of the tax credit, rail equipment orders this year had been running 75 per cent behind 1966.

Test Pilot Dies In Buffalo Crash

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — A test pilot, flying an F-100 jet fighter in his capacity as an Air National Guard major, was killed Friday night when the aircraft crashed and burned in a field east of here.

Volunteer firemen, called to the crash scene in the Town of Pendleton, found the body of James I. Meeker, 39, of Snyder, a Buffalo suburb, 200 yards from the wreckage. His parachute apparently failed to function after he ejected from the single-seat aircraft.

Meeker was a pilot for Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory of Cheektowaga in civilian life.

A spokesman for the Niagara Falls Air Force Base, Meeker's home station, said the pilot left earlier in the evening for a refueling exercise in Green Bay, Wis. After traveling only 80 miles, however, he encountered adverse weather conditions and turned back.

The crash scene is seven miles due east of the base.

Witnesses said they heard two sounds that resembled gunshots as the plane crashed. Repeated calls of "Mayday, Mayday," a radio distress signal, were picked up by airport control towers here and in Buffalo.

Firemen were forced to duck while ammunition exploded on the burning plane.

The cause of the crash was under investigation.

Meeker lived at 93 Halwell Drive.

Burglar Takes Gems

State Police today investigated a burglary reported at the home of Joseph Murphy, West Hurley, which netted the intruder a quantity of jewelry and six pairs of men's slacks, according to Sergeant Donald Paulsen. Troopers Fred Cooper and John Kohland investigated and reported entry was gained by smashing glass in a door leading to the kitchen. BCI investigators continued the investigation.

Youth Drowns

MEDINA, N.Y. (AP) — Edward Ruhlman, 9, drowned Friday night in a quarry pond owned by the Medina Conservation Club, Orleans County sheriff's deputies said.

The boy was the son of Mrs. Freida Ruhlman. His body was recovered by volunteer firemen. The family lives on Telegraph Road.

The Livingston County Sheriff's Department said David W. Bradley of York was helped from the pool when a fellow pupil saw he was in trouble.

The cause of death was not immediately determined, it said. The party was being held on a farm near the York Central School, which David attended. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Bradley.

The family lives on York Road West.

Fallout Shelters Tested in Georgia

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — After spending a crowded night on concrete floors, about 750 volunteers set out today to amuse their young, pass the time and perform tasks in the nation's largest fallout shelter study.

The volunteers, aged 6 months to 79 years, entered the bare, three-story, cream-bick building in downtown Athens late Friday and were sealed off for the weekend.

"This is not a pet demonstration, but a scientific experiment, a test of psychological reaction," said John A. Hammes, director of civil defense at the University of Georgia.

Trained civil defense researchers kept the shelter under constant observation.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "I had orders to shoot to kill anyone trying to flee Cuba," says a gunman on a Cuban coast guard torpedo boat who himself eluded Fidel Castro's patrols and came into exile by boat.

"I never obeyed that order," continued the refugee, Pedro Mayea Cazola, 26, "in the three years I was a gunman. But many others did."

More than 12,000 Cubans have reached the United States by boat since 1959, when Castro seized power. How many others died in the attempt is unknown.

"The Saint"—with Roger Moore starring—is NBC's late-in-the-season Sunday night entry in the adventure and derring-do field. Known also as Simon Templar, "The Saint" is author Leslie Charteris' long-popular lean, debonair fiction character.

Halo Around Your Television? — 'The Saint' May Be Nearby

NEW YORK
By DON ROYAL

A 20th-century swashbuckling buccaneer, Prince Charming, crusader, dashing knight, and Robin Hood—all are embodied in one man — Simon Templar, alias "The Saint."

What's more, "The Saint" has a tremendous sense of humor, possesses fantastic charm and drips with high sophistication.

He should be totally incredible. But, there he is, highly convincing, in color, on NBC portrayed by Roger Moore.

Roger Moore, in addition to being appropriately handsome, has the sort of tastes one imagines would certainly be those of the Leslie Charteris creation.

Moore likes all forms of entertainment, and is very fond of opera — a taste developed through living in Italy.

He likes fast sports cars. He gambles, with horse racing as one of his favorite betting pastimes. He likes good food, good drink, good clothes. His athletic prowess goes without saying—he does all the stunts in "The Saint" himself.

"The Saint," in the stories, and Roger, in life, are both hard to spot because of the crowd. That crowd is always ravishingly beautiful young women.

The audience feels real empathy for "The Saint," and author-creator Leslie Charteris says Simon Templar is not based on a real-life character, but is the type of person everyone secretly desires to be.

Charteris describes "The Saint" as: "A roaring adventurer who loves a fight... a dashing daredevil, imperturbable, debonair, preposterously handsome, a pirate or a philanthropist as the occasion demands. He lives for the pursuit of excitement... the one triumphant moment that is his alone."

Charteris never outlined "The Saint's" background, thought it is obvious he had a good upbringing and education.

In various stories, Charteris has disclosed the information that "The Saint" is 6 feet 2, and weighs 172 pounds. He has blue eyes and a magnificently tan, dark complexion. He can use a revolver with unerring skill and is an expert knife-thrower.

He speaks several languages, is a connoisseur of food and wine, a licensed pilot, loves good living, and is always dressed immaculately. He has remained 33 years old, like a grown-up Peter Pan, through the years.

ROGER MOORE, as the Saint chats with Suzanne Lloyd in one episode of the new, hour-long, Sunday night mystery-thriller, NBC • 10-11 p. m. Eastern Time.

Roger Moore is 6'2" in height. He is blue-eyed. His weight is 172 pounds.

If this reads like a playback of a preceding paragraph, it's only because Roger Moore is almost identical to the description of "The Saint" in all details except complexion. Roger is fair instead of dark, but does have a deep tan.

"The Saint" characterization is that of a gentleman reformed-crook who took justice in his own hands in order to help those who had been swindled, robbed, or in any other way betrayed by their fellowmen.

Of his attitude towards life, "The Saint" said, in one of the stories, "I never robbed anyone who wasn't a thief or a blackguard, although they might have been clever enough to stay within the law."

There must be a good number of these people around, because "The Saint" has amassed a bank balance of half a million pounds (that's about $1.5 million!), by taking 10 per cent of the proceeds of his capers.

With this income, it was not long before "The Saint" moved from his converted pillbox in North Devon to London and a luxury apartment in Brook Street, Mayfair. Our hero then moved from London to the United States (this coincided with Leslie Charteris himself moving to the United States).

In today's tales, he is a citizen of the world.

"The Saint" has kept abreast of the times, even though he first appeared in 1928 in Charteris' third novel, "Meet the Tiger." He reappeared a year later in a magazine called "The Thriller" as leader of an organization known as The Five Kings.

Charteris' character developed over the years, but the name was carefully selected before the first novel. Simon Templar and the nickname "The Saint" contain a message. "Simon was chosen because it would help to prove to his enemies that he was by no means simple. The "Templar" came from the Knights Templar—a military, religious order established by a band of knights who protected the pilgrims on their trips to the Holy Land in the 12th century. His nickname of "The Saint" was acquired partly from his initials, and partly from his saintly way of doing things.

The now-famous matchstick figure with the halo (an obvious association) which has become his trade-mark came early in "The Saint's" career.

Leslie Charteris explains: "By the time I was 10 my material desires and mercenary instincts were beginning to emerge and I co-ordinated these with my literary efforts by producing a weekly magazine which I peddled to my parents, aunts and uncles, and anyone who could be badgered into forking out for it."

"The whole of this magazine was authored by myself, including a comic strip... Since drawing came harder to me than writing, I did the comic in matchstick figures. So, when many years later I wanted a calling card device for a character whom I had already called "The Saint," I recalled those primitive little figures. All it took was an added halo."

DERRING-DO • is the the stock-in-trade of "The Saint", alias SIMON TEMPLAR, in the NBC • Sunday night thriller—10-11 p. m. Roger Moore approximates the fiction character of author Leslie Charteris in the difficult-to-play role.

Many actors have passed out that famous calling card of "The Saint."

On radio he has been portrayed by Tom Conway, Brian Aherne, Barry Sullivan and Vincent Price; in films by Louis Hayward, George Sanders, Hugh Sinclair and French actor Felix Marten (in a film made in France). But, to nearly everyone throughout the world, "The Saint" and Roger Moore are now one and the same person.

Roger Moore was introduced to the world a few years later than his alter ego. He left school in London at the age of 15. With a natural aptitude for drawing, he joined a film studio and learned the art of drawing animated cartoons.

He then became a film executive, including a comic strip—one of the sailors in the Robert Donat picture "Perfect Strangers" and one of the crowd in the Stewart Granger film of "Caesar and Cleopatra."

Director Brian Desmond Hurst suggested Roger take up acting as a career—and Moore enrolled at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. After playing many small parts in radio, television, and films, and a steady progression in his stage career, Roger came to New York and was signed for leading roles in television shows. M-G-M put him on contract.

Moore originally filmed 71 episodes of "The Saint," and then cast aside his halo. But, viewers wanted him back. NBC took the unprecedented step of accepting "The Saint" for syndication throughout America, and Roger agreed to embark on a new series of entirely fresh stories, this time in color.

Just because "The Saint" isn't in the fall schedule, don't write him off. "Saint" fans are vocal and persistent. And Simon Templar has triumphed over devices equally as flimsy as a program planner's pen. About "The Saint," one just never knows...

He's Pulling the Wool Over the Viewer's Eyes

By FRANK LANGLEY

NEW YORK—Can there possibly be an unused category for a beauty pageant?

The obvious answer is no. After all, we have Miss America, Miss Teen-age America, Miss USA, Misses International Beauty, World and Universe. And let's not forget the National College Queen and Junior Miss masques. Well, then, what could be left uncovered?

Would you believe, "Miss Wool of America?"

Well you better believe it because on Friday, June 30 some lucky, and lovely young lady is going to be crowned with that tabloid title.

The man responsible for this remarkable event is Al Cantwell, a veteran television producer and beauty pageant entrepreneur who is responsible for the Miss America TV format.

"Miss Wool is not going to be a beauty pageant in any sense of the term as we know it," Cantwell told us. "The only similarity is in the selection of a winner who will reign as Miss Wool for the entire year."

"There are no bathing suits or talent competitions. But there will be the most elegant fashions from miniskirts to formal gowns and some fine entertainment numbers by the girls and Jane Morgan and Donald O'Connor, who will emcee this how."

Asked further about the fashions, Cantwell allowed as how the whole affair was more-or-less a fashion show. In fact, it is probably the most cleverly produced, if not best disguised fashion show to come down the pike in a long time.

"Why not a fashion show in a beauty pageant format?" Cantwell said. "After all, we know that most pageants are viewed primarily by women. And what gal isn't interested in new fashions? So, we give them a double treat."

Cantwell is not only producing the pageant, or fashion show, or whatever it is, he also created a one-time television network to carry it.

"It cost me several hundred dollars in phone bills and the right ear of a capable assistant to pull that one off. Betty Tanner, who is co-ordinating activities for me, literally sat with phone in hand for a whole week, calling every television station manager she could get. And she came up with a network of over 125 stations."

Although the total affair has to be tabbed as one of the cleverest promotional productions ever, Cantwell denied that it is a 100 per cent woolen wingding.

Many Offers

In case you are in doubt about what a Tonight show appearance can do for a young performer, take the case of Jack Holmes, a singer-composer appearing at New York's The Bitter End. The morning after his appearance he had an offer of a Paramount screen test, Arthur Godfrey wants to record one of his songs, three night clubs made him offers, and he got a raise from The Bitter End.

New Ideas

Rat Patrol producer Jon Epstein talking about next season's shows says, "We'll have more of the same, but we're not going to sit still. We will have a touch of a new loom. We plan to get more depth of characters. And we'll get the boys off the desert more often. There's a lot of coastline around Africa, so in one show the action will be around a lighthouse; another will be in a beach fortress."

Hole in His Stocking

Sebastian Cabot, who has lost 50 pounds, told TV SCOUT that there was a great benefit. "Now I can look down and see my feet and know whether or not I have shoes on. I used to have to look in a full-length mirror."

FBI Is His 'Sponsor'

By STAN MAAYS

HOLLYWOOD—There's more than a trace of irony in Philip Abbott's voice when he says, "All those parts in Philco Playhouse, Circle Theater and Studio One got me second billing."

Abbott has what's called a "pivotal role" in The FBI on ABC-TV Sunday nights. He plays Arthur Ward, assistant bureau head, whose only duty is to pass orders on to Inspector Erskine (Efrem Zimbalist, Jr.) and the other agents.

"Oh, I'm happy about my little contribution each week," says Abbott. "Being on The FBI is kind of like being a patron."

"When I got the continuing role in 1964 I realized I'd have to adjust my sights. The good parts always go to the guest stars."

Abbott, who starred in dramas during those "golden days" when performing before a TV camera live was like being part of a theater production, has never thought of becoming anything else but an actor—"but not one on the fringe only, with a bit part here and there."

"There was one time when I thought about giving it all up, he recalls. "After the war (Abbott was a B-24 pilot) I had a modest success on stage and TV. But then the jobs suddenly tailed off."

"A good part came up on Studio One, that of a young genius pianist. Elsa Lanchester was making her TV debut in it. Well, the thing that gave me an emotional release was that I'd just gotten my commercial pilot's license. I went in for the reading with the thought that I've done all I possibly can for my career up to that point, and it was now up to them. That attitude got me that first big role."

No doubt TV's killing pace is partly the reason that the talents of veteran performers like Philip Abbott are never fully exploited, and they are forced to seek outlets elsewhere. In recent years Abbott says he's covered "dormant talents" as a member of the Theater West Workshop, where he has written and directed plays.

As an example of the frantic TV scene, Abbott cites his beginning with The FBI: "You know, I never did have a discussion with anyone about my part. I only met executive producer Quinn Martin once, and that was at a party when I asked to meet him. I haven't seen him since."

Limited through his role is, Abbott has managed to inject a couple of personal touches. Bureau head Ward is married, but it wasn't until The FBI's second season that Abbott displayed a wedding-ring—his own. And that's Abbott's family portrait on Ward's desk.

The FBI has become pretty much straight cops 'n robbers now, after they first went overboard in trying to humanize everybody.

It amuses Abbott, though, when he says he wishes just once he could order Inspector Erskine to button up his coat and wear a hat to look more like a real FBI man.

"Not even a personal directive from J. Edgar Hoover could get Efrem Zimbalist to button his coat," he laughs.

Watch His Left

At the Emmy Awards banquet, Mary Tyler Moore spotted Truman Capote across the room and asked, "If I go over to say hello to him, do you think he will hit me?" (For the uninitiated, Capote wrote Breakfast at Tiffany's, and Mary played Holly Golightly in the ill-fated musical version, set for Broadway, but closed after four preview performances.)

Buy Bonds where you work.

He does.

It's miserable work, crawling through a rice paddy. And being shot at. This American does the job for freedom's sake. So do thousands of his buddies. Many of these brave men also support freedom with their dollars. A majority of our servicemen overseas are investing in U.S. Savings Bonds. Would you like to show this man you're with him? One good way is to buy Savings Bonds where you bank or join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. You'll make a good investment. And you'll walk a bit taller.

U.S. Savings Bonds

How to Take a 'Trip'

HOLLYWOOD—It was like one of those psychedelic joints you find on Sunset Boulevard.

A smoke-filled room crowded with long-haired guys and short-skirted dolls and high above them, in a cage, a long-haired blonde wearing a bored expression and not much else.

Sitting alone at one table was a man taking a "trip" on LSD, the drug which can take you into lovely dream worlds or drop you suddenly into a mental institution.

This, however, was not Sunset Boulevard. It was Stage Three at Universal Studios.

The man on the "trip" was Bradford Dillman, playing the role of a scientist in a "think factory" for "Jigsaw," a two-hour movie destined for NBC-TV's World Premiere series.

Ordinarily this would be simple fare for this serious actor of "Long Day's Journey Into Night" and "Compulsion."

and the TV series Court Martial.

Between scenes, however, he explained both his interest in "Jigsaw" and his problems.

"It isn't often," he said, "that an actor gets a chance to travel an unexplored road as far as techniques are concerned. In this story I play someone who has accidentally taken LSD and I'm forced to take a second 'trip' to prove to myself that I was not guilty of a murder committed at the time I was on my first trip."

"Since I am establishing a precedent of how one reacts under the influence of the drug, I had to do some basic research on the subject. Does one fall down, weave like a drunk, act withdrawn from reality, or what?"

The subjective approach — taking the drug himself — occurred to him first, Brad admitted. "But my doctor said no, so instead I had some long interviews with two doctors who head a research project at UCLA on the effects of LSD."

"I learned that the layman usually cannot tell when a person is under the influence of LSD. Also, the reactions of one LSD trip and another are never quite the same. There are, however, some physical manifestations that are definite and I'm incorporating them into the part. The first is that LSD takers jump erratically in conversation from one subject to another. The second is that a taker is very repetitive in his speech mannerisms."

The subject of LSD and what happens when you take it was quite a challenge to all the technicians on the film as well as to Dillman, who laughed:

"We're using what we call 'wild and free' use of sets, cameras and lights. The audience we hope will get the impression they've had a few milligrams of LSD."

Trapper Writes Letter

Seymour Burns, the producer of The Red Skelton Hour, got a letter from an Alaskan fur trapper, recently returned to the land of television sets. He objected to a dance in which the girls wore bulky Floradora Girl costumes. "I haven't seen a woman for five months, and I come back and find you've covered them up with all them clothes. Put them back the way they was," he wrote. By chance the next program set (they are taped weeks in advance) had the girls in can-can costumes. Burns got another letter from the trapper, "I'm glad you took my advice. I think your program will do better from now on."

TV Questions & Answers

MISSION: MARRIAGE — Is Barbara Bain of Mission: Impossible married? — J. J., Portland, Ore.

Barbara is married to costar Martin Landau and the mother of two young daughters.

FAMILIES — Is Brian Keith of Family Affair really a family man? He seems so perfect in the part. — A.F., Hartford, Conn.
Keith is indeed a family man, although the age range of his real life family is somewhat different. He and his wife, actress Judy Landau, have four children aged six, five, four and three.

ANOTHER DOOMSDAY — I saw a movie called "The Doomsday Flight" on television and I would like to know if it will be on again, because I want my friend to see it. — Hilda Gutierrez, Hialeah, Fla.

That film was one of several made especially for television and definitely will be repeated although we do not know at this time exactly when. We suggest you keep a check on your local listings for it.

BEN'S BUSINESS — I've been told that Ben Alexander makes more money as a businessman than as an actor. What business is he in? — P. A., Miami, Fla.

What isn't he would be simpler to answer. Ben is a registered mortician and is a partner in a string of mortuaries and cemeteries. He also owns and operates a string of auto agencies in California; runs a real estate organization, gas stations and motels, and this year became the owner of a brewery. In his spare time, he acts.

PHYLLIS AND FANG — Please set me straight on Phyllis Diller's married life, T. M., Abilene, Texas.

Fang is (or was) Phyllis' first husband, Sherwood Diller. They were divorced in 1965 and she married actor Warder Donovan the same year. Mr. and Mrs. Donovan separated for a while, but they are currently together again.

EDDIE THE RAT — Some time ago I saw an old movie on television called Brother Rat. It was about West Point and one of the young men looked very much like Eddie Albert of Green Acres. I have been wondering if it could be the same man. — F. G., Portland, Ore.

It is the same man. In fact, Eddie got his first break in the Broadway version of that play which also won him his first trip to Hollywood.

Changes Color

On the glamorous life of a star, Edie Adams, who is presently at the Copa in New York, likes to change the color of her eyes to match her gowns when she is filming those cigar commercials. (It's possible with contact lenses, you know.) During a recent taping session, Edie put on a bright green dress, but couldn't find her green lenses. After a 10-minute hunt, the director said, "Edie, why don't you just wear your blue lenses over your yellow ones?"

TED JORDAN

Jordan Bites the Dust

HOLLYWOOD — The day "Uncle Ted" came to town was a memorable one for his 5-year-old nephew sitting in the front row of the Circleville, Ohio, theater.

It was the first time the boy had ever seen "Uncle Ted" perform and Ted Lewis, the song and dance man, was his usual smash hit. You remember Ted, the veteran vaudeville star, who twirled a hat with a silver lining to the greeting "Is everybody happy?"

He's now in his 80s but he still plays Las Vegas once a year and not long ago he was a guest star on TV's Hollywood Palace.

For the boy, also named Ted Lewis, "Uncle Ted's" performance that day in Circleville created a lasting impression. When he grew up, the boy vowed to himself, he, too, would find a career in show business.

For 20 years now Ted Jordan—he dropped the "Lewis" because of his uncle's fame—has been an actor in Hollywood. The vow he made as a 5-year-old never left him. Stardom may have escaped him but now, on TV's Gunsmoke, he's finally winning recognition which has been so elusive for him.

He's playing the continuing role of Nathan Burke, the Dodge City express office clerk, and he's doing so well the role has been growing in size and importance.

Actually, you see Ted Jordan on Gunsmoke every week. When the series switched to color last year, they filmed a new opening title in which Jim Arness guns down a fellow and Jordan played the role.

It's kind of funny, too. Off-stage Jim and Ted are buddies who spend a great deal of time together hunting, fishing and skiing. They were in the High Sierras skiing when Gunsmoke was cancelled recently, to be renewed three days later. "Jim couldn't believe it," Ted reports, "I couldn't either."

Along with acting in movies and TV, Ted is a professional swimmer and diver and also works as a stunt man, doubling for stars. About not cracking the elusive star barrier, Ted is philosophical.

"The business," he says "has been good to me. I'm giving it my best. If I ever hit it big it will be fine. If I don't that's fine with me, too. I've enjoyed every minute of those 20 years. I'm grateful to 'Uncle Ted' for giving me the inspiration for a career in show business."

Will Defend Actors

Bishop made an on-the-air reference to critics who blast guests who appear on talk shows. Doug McClure heard the show and offered to go on and defend actors who do charity shows and the like. Bishop plans to book him later.

You're in Love, Stan . . .

HOLLYWOOD — If you're like me you always fall for the girls in the TV commercials. Remember Barabar Feldon before she got a role in Get Smart, how inviting she looked rolling around on that rug talking to us "tigers"? And that slim redhead who undulates her way out of a tube of hair cream?

Ah, but the one for me is the blonde who pokes her head above the water and asks you to join her at a tuna dinner party.

I decided to accept her invitation.

"You'll have to pardon me while I get rid of this tray," said this striking beauty who looks like a ballerina. "I have trouble balancing this tuna. It's awfully heavy, you know."

Her name is Verna Cornelius. She's British. She's a fashion model. And she's gorgeous.

"The people at the agency told me they tested 300 girls for the commercial until they found you. Is that correct?" I asked, trying to appear casual in the presence of all this loveliness.

"Yes," she replied. "It was a funny thing when it happened. I was having a baby at the time..."

There followed a period of awkward silence while I mentally picked up pieces of a shattered dream.

"You see," she continued in her soft British accent, "I had only appeared in some still ads for Chicken of the Sea, so they'd never heard my voice. After testing all those girls someone decided to test me. I got the job right after I got out of the hospital."

"Married long?" was about all I could muster at this point.

"Oh, very much so," she proudly confided. "I was modeling in London six years ago when I met my husband. He was working in the American Embassy at the time."

"Well," I uttered, trying not to appear too downcast, "tell me, how much time do you spend in the water doing these commercials?"

"Usually four to five hours at a stretch. There are so many ruined!"

VERNA CORNELIUS

retakes and setups, you know," she replied.

But Verna doesn't get cold or waterlogged. She let me in on a trade secret. Underneath the water line, about armpit high, she wore a frogman's wet suit.

"Have you had any movie offers?" I asked.

"I'm not interested in an acting career," said Verna, quite resolutely, adding, "although several studios have contacted me. No, I like what I'm doing. I'm happily married. My husband's a successful economist. And now we have a child."

It figured that Verna would be smart in money matters, too. The $30,000 she realizes from these commercials, plus what she earns fashion modeling and doing other commercials, goes into property.

There wasn't much point in carrying on the interview, feeling as disillusioned as I was. Looking around for an out I noticed several people standing behind cameras staring at us and I asked Verna who they were.

"Well," she said, getting a little impatient herself. "Those are the people who produce the commercial. And they're not staring at me! Don't you think you ought to get out of the water now. That suit must be ruined!"

Abby Defends Parlor Games—

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Oh, those jolly game shows! They're so educational.

The other day on "Snap Judgment"—Betty White, Soupy Sales and two everyday citizens—you could learn such synonyms as "trickster" for "deceiver," "devil" for "demon" and "dance" for "Charleston."

On "Jeopardy," push your button, answer the question and win points. The daily lineup includes "Everybody's Talking," "Newlywed Game," "dating Game," "Concentration," "Supermarket Sweep," "Eye Guess," "Let's Make a Deal" and others.

ABC launches Monday what it calls "The Family Game"—a fun-filled half-hour which will reveal how much or how little parents and children really know about each other.

Critics ignore or pan the daytime games, but now we take you to the participant's side of the microphone.

Says Abby Dalton: "I don't care if they're scorned by the critics so long as they're not scorned by those nice ladies at home."

Former television wife of Joey Bishop and Jackie Cooper, Miss Dalton is a regular on NBC's "Hollywood Squares." Nine showbiz notables, including regulars Wally Cox, Charley Weaver, Rose Murie and Morey Amsterdam, climb spiral staircases into boxes arranged like tic-tac-toe, the old X and O pencil game. There they match wits with two citizens.

Says Miss Dalton, a slim, blue-eyed, caramel blonde.

"I love being on the show because I like playing parlor games. And I don't have to be away from home a lot—they knock off a week's five shows in an evening, with 15-minute breaks and a one-hour halt for dinner."

Miss Dalton, a regular also on "PDQ" saved her ultimate defense of the game shows for last:

"Tom Kennedy of 'You Don't Say,' a charming, bright man who's always in good taste, was nominated this year for an Emmy!"

TV SCOUT REPORTS

They are still laughing at MGM about the way a location site was cleared for filming for The Man From U.N.C.L.E.

Seems two helicopter pilots went out to spot some rolling hill terrain on the vast MGM back lot. They reported back to director Marc Daniels that they had found just the spot, but there was one small obstacle. A couple, obviously on a lunch break from somewhere else on the lot, was using the spot for romance. Daniels quickly came up with a solution. He sent the pilots back with a bull-horn and a machine gun loaded with blanks. They flew over the spot, swooped down, fired a few rounds, and boomed out over the bull-horn, "THRUSH frowns on this sort of thing." When last seen, the couple was making a dust storm escape, and the lot was free for U.N.C.L.E. cameras and crew.

Steve Ihnat, a busy supporting actor on TV, has appeared in many segments of many series. But it took a Gunsmoke, in which he played a sympathetic bad guy, for him to get a kiss. Jan Shepard, who played his wife, gave him the smack. But his character got killed at the end of the show, keeping Jan's streak intact. She's been "widowed" in about 10 straight roles this season.

WITH EQUAL OR BETTER COMPREHENSION

The internationally famous EVELYN WOOD Reading Dynamics Institute

INVITES YOU TO ATTEND A FREE DEMONSTRATION OF THIS UNIQUE METHOD

Where you will:

- See an amazing documented film about Reading Dynamics.
- Learn how Reading Dynamics can help you to faster reading, improved comprehension, greater retention.

AN OUTSTANDING SUCCESS

Results have been reported in Time, Newsweek, Business Week and Esquire. Demonstrators have appeared on television with Jack Paar, Gary Moore and Art Linkletter.

Describing Reading Dynamics' impact on some of our nation's legislators, Time said, "Washington has seen nothing like it since the days when Teddy Roosevelt read three books a day and ran the country at the same time."

Senator Herman E. Talmadge, Georgia: "In my opinion if these reading techniques were instituted in the public and private schools of our country, it would be the greatest single step we could take in educational progress."

Senator Proxmire, Wisconsin: "I must say that this is one of the most useful education experiences I have ever had. It certainly compares favorably with the experiences I've had at Yale and Harvard."

A Reading Dynamics Class at St. Louis University had an average beginning speed of 357 words per minute, on ending speed of 1,810 words per minute. Average comprehension rose from 73% to 83%.

HOW IS IT DIFFERENT FROM OTHER COURSES?

No machines are used. You learn, instead, to use your hand as a pacer — a tool you always have with you.

Conventional rapid reading courses aspire to 500-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamics graduates can read between 1,500 and 3,000 words per minute, and may go even higher.

OUR POLICY

We will guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student by AT LEAST 3 TIMES as measured by the beginning and ending tests. We will refund the entire tuition of any student upon the completion of his course who does not obtain at least the tripling of his reading efficiency. This guarantee is conditioned upon the student's attending all of the required classes (or making up any missed sessions with an instructor). He also must have completed the required number of homework hours according to directions. Any student who must withdraw from the course for any reason may re-enter any subsequent courses at any future time, at no additional cost.

* Some firms pay full or partial tuition fee. Check with your employer

Question—TV Lightning, Can It Strike Twice?

NEW YORK — One of the most keenly awaited series being readied for fall viewing is called Good Company but it might be more aptly titled Person to Person, Revisited.

There are a few basic differences: celebrated attorney F. Lee Bailey will be asked to fill the sizeable shoes of the late Edward R. Murrow; Bailey will be seen in the homes of the famous rather than in a studio as Murrow was; and the program will visit only one home per night.

Except for these changes the new show will be similar to Person, but no one can accuse producer John Aaron of stealing the idea. Aaron co-produced the original with Murrow for seven highly successful television seasons.

"But I don't like the idea of comparing this show with Person," he said recently. "It will be a totally different thing, and the biggest difference is Mr. Bailey."

With this kind of show you have to be completely honest, and if I told myself that the show is the most important thing, or the people we visit, or their house, I would be kidding myself. It is Bailey, and the show will ride or fall with him."

Despite the strength of that statement, Aaron does not in the least downgrade the importance of the show's subjects.

"Naturally," he said, "we will be calling on very popular people like Kirk Douglas, Paul Newman and perhaps Bobby Kennedy. But it is not just the name that is important to us. The content of the show is more important than the name."

"Say, for instance, we would like to visit a very big star who is very popular with everyone in the family. But he happens to be a bit retiring in private life and is a little reluctant to do it."

"We would not have him on the show. If he cannot be relaxed and easy-going, how can the audience be relaxed and happy with their visit."

"We also don't want the other type: the extreme extrovert or the sensation seeker."

Aaron also noted that the

show will be as topical as possible.

"We will never shoot more than a few days in advance so that we can be very close to what is going on at that time, like the current Mid-East Crisis."

"And if necessary, if the situation demands, we will do it live."

One of the problems Aaron faces is the show's time slot, opposite Dean Martin.

"If I weren't so determined to keep Good Company totally honest and free of sensation, I could easily overcome that problem," he said.

"I would have Jerry Lewis on the premiere program."

Disney Empire Continues With Brother Roy at Helm

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Six months ago today, Walt Disney died, leaving an entertainment empire without the creative force that shaped its destinies for 40 eventful years.

Walter Elias Disney had been the innovator and driving genius behind an enterprise that grew from Mickey Mouse cartoons to diversified entertainment for uncounted millions in almost every nation.

To many observers, his loss seemed crucial to the company that he and brother Roy founded. Yet such was his restlessly forward-looking nature that his plans continue to propel the Disney empire, and will for years.

There have been changes, of course. Key decisions do not come with the crackle of finality, as when Walt was in charge. Now policy matters go to committee, with consequent delay and watering down.

Yet top executives are still so attuned to Walt's way of thinking that decisions hew to his philosophy. Brother Roy, 74 next week, admits the committee system has faults:

"It is not logical for the long pull, but it is logical for this period we are going through. The system is working, and everyone is in perfect harmony. As long as that continues, we're all right."

"But some day one of the guys may grab a project and skyrocket with it. Then we'll turn and make him leader. But he won't be another Walt; I don't think anyone will ever be."

Roy continues as president and board chairman of Walt Disney Productions, and makes command decisions that once were Walt's. Roy was always the moneyman, content to remain in the shadow of his spotlighted younger brother. His new position as solo head has required adjustments.

"I've tried hard not to do anything that I didn't do before, but it hasn't always been easy," said the bespectacled balding Roy.

"I want to stay out of the show world; that's not my field. I couldn't possibly fit in Walt's shoes."

The committee on which he relies for decisions in the show world field consists of eight men, all studio bred. During most of their adult lives they worked closely with Walt; all are passionately devoted to the Disney cause. Two are related to the Disney family.

The committee: Bill Anderson, long No. 1 aide to Walt in the movie field and now vice president in charge of production.

Roy E. Disney, son of the president and well-versed in studio departments.

Ron Miller, husband of Walt's daughter and now a producer.

Winston Hibbler, expert in nature films, which he narrates.

Bill Walsh, who assisted in creation of the Mickey Mouse

Club, "Shaggy Dog" and "Mary Poppins."

Jim Algar, a cartoonist turned producer.

Harry Tytle, a 30-year veteran now producing television shows.

Card Walker, marketing vice president with vast knowledge of what will and will not sell.

"The system is working well," says Bill Anderson, the hearty chief of production.

"We've had a couple of knock-down, drag-out fights, but that's healthy. We had 'em with Walt, too. Walt taught us how to fight and get along."

"There is no back-biting here, there are no cliques. That's something Walt would never allow."

The loss of Walt as a decision maker is felt by many of the studio hierarchy.

"We all miss the man," remarked Ron Miller, who has the size of a professional footballer which he was and the profile of an actor which he wasn't.

"If any of us had a major problem, we could take it to Walt and all of a sudden we had no problem. He solved it."

In another office of the animation building you can find producer Bill Walsh, director Robert Stevenson and story man Don DaGradi working on a new fantasy, "Boy-Car-Girl."

DaGradi laughed as he recalled how Walt stayed ahead of his film creators: "We used to be puzzled that he seemed to understand the storyboards—pinned-up—sketches of proposed scenes before we could explain them—or he would ignore whole sections of them."

"Finally he admitted that he would come into our offices the night before and look at the storyboards to see what we were up to. He even went through the wastebaskets!"

"Walt had the habit of coming up with properties that nobody had ever heard of," continued British-born Stevenson. "Just when it seemed that we had nothing to work on, he'd reach into his bottom drawer and produce something worthwhile."

Walt's office, at the far end of the third floor, remains unchanged since his death last Dec. 15. Likewise the studio he built is unchanged in form and operation. That situation is likely to continue until a strong new leader emerges to take charge of the empire that started with a mouse.

Bishop's Guest

Recently Bob Thomas, who wrote "King Cohen," the biography of Harry Cohen, was a guest on The Joey Bishop Show. Since much of the book was critical of Cohen, Bishop tried to line up someone to take the magnate's side in what they hoped would be a debate. Nobody accepted.

Disney Studios Still Has Unique Filmland Niche

By BOB THOMAS

AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Disney studio has always occupied a unique position in the film industry, and so it remains six months after Walt Disney's death.

All other movie companies now take in stars, producers and directors as partners, giving them autonomy and a share of the profits. The Disney studio remains authoritarian, and no outsider participates in the profits.

Other studios purvey increasing quantities of sex and violence. Disney films are doggedly aimed at the family audience.

Highbrow critics rail at the Disney product as juvenile and old-fashioned. The Disney people merely point to happy audiences—and stockholders. For the half-year ending April 1, net income from Walt Disney Productions and its subsidiaries was $4,898,000, up from $4,502,000 for the like period last year.

Many expected Disney stock to plummet after the death of the empire's guiding genius. Astonishingly, it rose to new highs. The quotations was 69 when Walt succumbed Dec. 15; lately it has been in the high 90s.

President Roy Disney has said the upward trend started before Walt died; all film stocks have risen as buyers realized the immense worth of the movie backlogs. Investors may also have been influenced by rumors of a merger of Disney with a huge corporation.

Roy scorns such an idea. "We continue to get offers of merger or acquisition by big companies in steel, food, merchandizing, technical companies and conglomerates like Litton," he said. "If we accepted such an offer, it would mean dominance by outsiders. We know our operation; we've been selling entertainment for over 40 years. We don't need anyone to tell us how to do it."

"Why would we merge for money? We don't need money. Now, we're not going to turn our back on any money that's offered us. But it's not worth it at that price."

Roy added that the Disney projects, thanks to the foresight of Walt.

"He was the damndest planner I ever saw," said the older brother with unconcealed admiration. "He loved planning things that might be three, five, even ten years in the future. That was what was so unusual about the fellow: He could take care of matters at hand while dreaming for the future."

"That's why we're in such good condition today. Most other film companies are in a hysteria of mergers, acquisitions and diversification; that's because they didn't plan. We've got enough going to keep us busy for years."

He outlined major areas:

1. Disney World. The Florida

Legislature passed and the governor signed enabling legislation for creation of a 43-square-mile complex near Orlando to house an entertainment park, city of tomorrow, industrial park and airport of the future.

Research on the first phase have begun a water control plan and a design for the park. Consultations have started with big corporations which want to share in the whole project.

"We hope to open the entertainment complex in January of 1971," said Disney. "We'll open up with a good show, but the park will continue to grow for five to seven years. We hope to have the city of tomorrow up and running by 1978."

THE EXHIBITIONISTS — For years now I have been wondering about baseball coverage and the stupid ban of any offbeat activity like a fight between players or some kid chasing across the field. The TV people try to say that their coverage is great but you have to go to the ball park to see the whole thing, which they will not show. Why?—A.B., Hartford, Conn.

There are two reasons, and two sensibilities. The first is that baseball is not a body contact sport like football or hockey, and the powers-that-be feel it would be degrading and poor sportsmanship to show lost tempers and bloody battling. The second, and far more sensible, has to do with fan activity, rather than player activity. When TV was younger, fans would deliberately run onto the field, or provoke some nonsense, to get their faces onto the home screen. Since the ban, this activity has almost totally disappeared.

HOGAN RATES — Where is Hogan's Heroes in the ratings? BB., Peoria, Ill.

Hogan has been hanging around the 20 mark in the National Neilsens which has kept the series alive.

OVERSEAS RATE — The Avengers is my very favorite television show. Where can I write to the stars, Diana Rigg and Patrick Macnee? — Robin Peterson, Superior, Wis.

The Avengers address is: ABC-TV, Ltd., Broom Road, Teddington, Middlesex, England. Be sure you put the proper postage on, which is 20c per half ounce.

Milt Josefsberg, the head story man on The Lucy Show, says her comedy is even fresh in reruns. "Like Chaplin, all Lucy's work is physical comedy, so it stays fresh. It wouldn't be true if her comedy was dialogue comedy."
